This term characterises the unparalleled close Anglo-American relations during the Second World War and in the time thereafter. The shared perception that Nazi Germany and the Soviet Union constituted major external threats to their well-being bound the societies and leaderships of Great Britain and the United States together. The looming menace ceased to exist after the break-up of the Soviet Union and the demise of Communism, and for several authors so did the raison d'être of the Special Relationship as well. It was more however that brought these two countries together than the shared perception of a communist threat. Why is it that neither country has fully adjusted its mind to thinking of the members of the other society as foreigners, and that Americans still refer to...
